CHICAGO, SATURDAY, JANUARY 15, 1853.

Summary of News.

OUR READERS WILL REMEMBER THE DECISION OF the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Richard Ellis vs. the People of Illinois, affirming the right of a State to pass laws concerning Fugitive Slaves, provided those laws were to aid, and not retard their capture. We have now received the Opinion of Justice McLean dissenting from this decision. In the course of it he says: It is contrary to the nature and genius of our Government, to publish an individual twice for the same offence. Where the jurisdiction is clearly vested in the Federal Government, and an adequate punishment has been provided by it, for an offence, no State, it appears to me, can punish the same act. The assertion of such a power, involves the right of a State to punish all offences, punishable under the acts of Congress. This would practically disregard, if it did not destroy this important branch of criminal justice, clearly vested in the Federal Government. The exercise of such a power by the States would, in effect, be a violation of the Constitution of the United States, and the Constitution of the respective States.

THE LATE HIGH WINDS HAVE RAVED IN MANY marine disasters. The brig Oceana, at Boston, from Buenos Ayres, reports having fallen in with floating wine casks and sundry boxes, in lat. 22 81, long. 38 17, evidently the remains of a wrecked vessel's cargo. ——The brig Baron de Castine, from Frankfort for Havana, went ashore on Seal Island, but was got off. The bark Mary Boardman went ashore at Holmes' Hole on Thursday. The schooners Ellen Dale, Sarah Adeline, and Columbia, the brig Orb, and other craft also suffered off the coast during the storm on Tuesday.

WE HEAR THAT AN IMPORTANT RAILROAD CONsolidation has been consummated between the different Companies owning the Great Central line of this State, from Albany to Rochester.

A LOOK AT LEADERS.

From the valedictory of the Earl of Derby' on leaving his Premiership, we extract the following, published in the London Times:

The following day, in answer to a further communication from Her Majesty, the Earl of Aberdeen, the other gentleman to whom Her Majesty had entrusted the formation of the new Administration; but upon what principle that Administration is to be formed, how that Administration is to be composed, what are to be its measures, the views, or its principles, I know not. When, however, I presume, that before long we shall receive from the noble Earl himself a full declaration of his intentions and views upon this important subject. I, my lords, for my part, and probably your lordships will remember, that that noble Earl has, upon more than one occasion, declared in this house that the question of Free Trade, he knew of none upon which there was any difference of opinion between himself and the present Government. I presume, therefore, it is the intention of the noble Earl, and I shall believe it until I hear him contradict it himself, to carry on the Government, if he shall be enabled to form it, upon a strictly Conservative principle, and in a Conservative spirit. How that principle is to be carried out at present, with such associations and support as I apprehend the noble Earl must avail himself of to form a Government, I confess I entertain some little doubt and some anxiety; but of this I say nothing. I abstain from any single expression of opinion, or from prejudging the course that may be pursued by the noble Earl. This however I will venture to say, in his absence as well as in his presence I am confident he relies, and he relies justly, on more forbearance from that great Conservative party with whom I have the honor of acting than Conservative party has experienced at the hands of others. I will venture to promise this—if the Government about to be formed be conducted on Conservative principles, and resist the onward progress of Democratic power in the Constitution, in that event the noble Earl may rely on having, if not the cordial, at all events, the silent and unostentatious support of the great Conservative party in this country.

From the review of the intriguing administration we copy the following:

If we look to the department of the law, we shall find that greater improvements and reforms have taken place in that department within the last twelve months than for many previous years—reforms, the magnitude and importance of which have been finely acknowledged on both sides of the house, and for which the country and the Government are indebted to the unwearied zeal and assiduity, to the distinguished talent and thorough professional knowledge, of my noble and learned friend who now sits on the woolsack—and to whom, when he quits that woolsack, it will be difficult for any Government to find a successor who will not give cause for regret at his leaving it. I take no credit on behalf of the present Government for the state of the finances of the country; but I think I may take credit on behalf of the Government for having done this—for having for the first time broken through that gloomy, which for so many years, to the injury of the public service, with respect to the internal defence of the country. And while we leave this country in a state of hostility—been abroad with friendly relations subsisting with all the great powers, we shall leave it in a condition of self defence, partially effected, and for the further progress of which we have laid the grounds, which, I hope, will not be abandoned by those who succeed to us. I trust they will not be unmindful of these great elements of self defence which we have successfully called into operation—namely, the establishment of that constitutional force, the militia of the country, and the increase of that naval force on which, primarily, and in the first instance, the safety and honor of the country depend. We have, then, the Administration with the country in a state, I hope, of tranquility, contentment, prosperity, and friendship with foreign powers, and of increased, if not entirely perfected, means of self defence and self dependence.

☞ The Times gives the following facts and figures as evidence of the extravagance and we might add of the prosperity of New York:

Our foreign import list for the week embraces—

In silk goods	$996,490
In teas	338,930
In Cigars	70,816
In Coffee	70,060
In Gold Watches	56,964
In Wines	21,176
Total six articles	$1,784,536

During the week, a new Hotel was formally opened to the popular view and public patronage, which is erected on Broadway, 200 feet front, six stories high, and the front of pure white marble. The cost of construction is stated at THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS, and the cost of upholstery, silver plate, and Sheffield ware—the cheapest dish costing thirty-two dollars and a half—and other appliances, at three THREE HUNDRED and SEVENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS additional, making together an investment in the one Hotel, of $675,000, and this in quick succession to another on the same street, and in the same vicinity, which it was thus learned of the houses involved a total cost of $950,000.

The sparkling details of the interior of the establishment just opened have been too recently made familiar to the eye of the public, (and those of its predecessor nor forgotten) to require recapitulation. It is worthy of passing remark, however, that the satin plantings of the tidal chamber, assigned, according to a very popular but very indelicate fashion, to the Republican turtle doves, who visit the Metropolis after pairing time, are set down at five hundred dollars, and a single counterpane of the Governor's room, prepared for the cousin of the Democratic Chief Magistrate of the State of $250! The mirror chandelier cost $1,100; the curtains of the ladies' parlor $750 to each window, and the grand action piano forte $1,500!

An Independent Whig!!

Mr. Raymond, the able editor of the N. Y. Times, is a whig, but an independent thinker and writer, and does not lack in the manifestation of originality towards his political opponents, —a trait of character which the New York editors, generally much need. In relation to the Foreign Policy of the Government, the Times possesses the liberal views of the democratic party.

We find these remarks in the Democratic Press of the 11th: The word 'but' amazes us. We will indicate it so that it can be distinctly seen, for example, "Mr. Raymond, the able Editor, is a whig, but an independent thinker and writer." Here we see the difference between copulative and disjunctive conjunctions. The word and would have changed the color marvellously—in fact, taken it right out. That brief collection of letters (but) is the hinge on which the whole turns, and we confess that rather grates on our ears. To be called an "obstinate conservative" is not as bad as to have it insinuated that one does not think independently." This is "the most unkindest cut of all." In this free country, we are all sensitive on the point of liberty, and do not like to be told that we are mentally weak to think for ourselves, or too morally weak to escape venality. Reader, please try to take the full force of it,—a whig not only independent enough to think for himself in the deep retirement of his secret mental workings, but actually to write out his thoughts and to express to an astonished community his own independent views.

But we have married a Democrat's daughter! In truth, can he be a Whig, if he has the liberal views and independence of a Democrat? Is not the Times, after all, a mixed sheet, one side Whig, the other Democrat?—Still, if the Press call it a Whig paper, we shall try to consider it such.

City Governments.

To those who keep up at all with the news of N. Y. city, the subject of the Broadway Railroad will become familiar and yet not tiresome. The subject has lately assumed a new interest, as it now stands, it is supreme Court vs. City Corporation, and the Legislature must take it in hand. In the letter yesterday, from our New York correspondent, will be found a clear sketch of it, and the hints he gives to younger cities is worthy of being heeded. Nothing is more unjust, or more unlike, to the injury of the public service, with respect to the internal defence of the country. And while we leave this country in a state of hostility—been abroad with friendly relations subsisting with all the great powers, we shall leave it in a condition of self defence, partially effected, and for the further progress of which we have laid the grounds, which, I hope, will not be abandoned by those who succeed to us. I trust they will not be unmindful of these great elements of self defence which we have successfully called into operation—namely, the establishment of that constitutional force, the militia of the country, and the increase of that naval force on which, primarily, and in the first instance, the safety and honor of the country depend. We have, then, the Administration with the country in a state, I hope, of tranquility, contentment, prosperity, and friendship with foreign powers, and of increased, if not entirely perfected, means of self defence and self dependence.

New Works in Press.

"THE SENATOR'S SON—A Story, dedicated to the Law Makers," is the title of a volume of some 300 pages, soon to be issued. The story is from the pen of Motta Victoria Fuller, and judging from the opening chapters which we have read, the work will obtain a wide spread popularity and prove a powerful auxiliary in the Temperance movement. Like Uncle Tom's Cabin the subject is an evil of a social and national character, and the gifted author has portrayed it with a vividness and power that arrests and fixes the attention from the first chapter.

The story of the Senator's Son is a reflex of too many sad histories in real life, and presents the convincing argument in favor of the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks by statutory enactments. It will be a book for the people, and the millions should possess and read it.

Letter from Hon. Horace Mann to a Young Lawyer.

WASHINGTON, July 23d, 1852.

MY DEAR SIR: Your kindly expressed note of the 9th inst. finds me with head and hands full of occupation. But I can never turn away from a young man asking from me a word of counsel, any more than I could from a drowning man. To save a fellow-being from death is a small thing. To save him from error a great one.

As you are an entire stranger to me, and have given me no information in regard to your age, or the circumstances of your early life, and only mention that you propose to be a lawyer, I can only give my remarks so pointed an application as I otherwise might. I must, therefore, speak more generally; and point out, in their order, some of a young man's necessities. I hope you will find, in yourself but little to be supplied.

First, you need Health. An earnest student is prone to ruin his health. Here, then, is the first point to be attended to. Never study now without cessation, he can do so always. Because he does not see the end of his strength, he foolishly concludes there is no end. A spendthrift of health is one of the most reprehensible of spendthrifts. I am certain I could have performed twice the labor, both better and with greater ease to myself, had I known as much of the Laws of Health and Life, at twenty-one, as I do now. In college, I was taught all about the motions of the planets, as carefully as those of my watch; but I was in danger of getting off the track of. I had not known how to trace their orbits; but about my own organization, and the conditions indispensable to the healthful exercises of my own body, I was left in profound ignorance. Nothing could be more preposterous. I ought to have begun at home, and taken that which I should have come their turn. The consequence was, I broke down at the beginning of my second college year and have never had a well day since. Whatever labor I have been able to do, I have done it all on credit, instead of capital—a most ruinous way, either in regard to health or money. For the last twenty-five years, in that to regain health, I have been put, from day to day, on my good behavior; and during the whole of this period, as an Hibernian would say, if I had lived as often folks do for a month, I should have died in a fortnight.

Health has a great deal to do with what the world calls talent. Take a lawyer's life thro', and high he ith as far equal to fifty per cent. more than brain. Endurance, cheerfulness, wit, eloquence, attain a force and splendor, with health, which they never can approach without it. It often happens that the credit awarded to the intellect belongs to the digestion. Though I do not believe that genius and cuppepsy are convertible terms, yet the former can never rise to its loftiest heights unaided by the latter.

Again, a wise man with a great enterprise before him, first looks round for suitable instruments wherewith to execute it; and he thinks it all important to command these instruments, before he begins his labor. Health is an indispensable instrument for the best performance of the highest finish of all work. Think of the immense advantage you would have in a suit in court, if, after a week's or a fortnight's investigation of facts, you could come into it in the closing moment, on the last day, fresh and elastic, with only so much more of momentum and fervor for the velocity and the glow you had acquired, while your wilful opponent had little more vitality than a bag of sand. How long will our teachers and trainers of youth suffer boxers and racers to be wiser in their generation than themselves?

Have you ever studied Human Physiology? If not, get such a work as Jarvis', or Cutter's or Cole's, or Carpenter's, and "read, learn and inwardly digest" it, and then obey it religiously. I say religiously; for Health comes with the fear of God, to conscience and religion. The materials being given, a man is as responsible for his health as for his character. He determines what the former shall be not less than the latter. Extraordinaries excepted, a man should be ashamed of being in ill health as he should be of getting drunk.

But I cannot dwell longer on this topic. Get health, if you have it not; keep it, if you have it.

Do you understand Phrenology? The principles of Phrenology lie at the bottom of all sound mental philosophy, and all the sciences depending upon the science of Mind; and all of sound theology, too. Combe's "Constitution of Man" is the greatest book that has been written for centuries. It shows us those conditions of our being without whose observance we can not be wisely useful or happy. It demonstrates from our very organization, and from our relation to the universe in which we are placed, that we can not be prosperous and happy in sinful courses (a word) unless we are stupid, and cannot be happy unless we are good. It "vindicates the ways of God to man" better than any published treatise I have ever read. If unacquainted with this work, you should read some elementary books on the science first, and then master the "Constitution of Man."

It has been objected to this work that it tends to infidelity and materialism. I could never discover the slightest ground for this objection. Instead of tending to Infidelity, I think it leads to Fidelity, both to God and to Man; and its only semblance to materialism consists in the solid basis which it supplies for Natural Religion. Man would be more than mortal if he can withstand the ceaseless importunities that are found in the lotby.

I designed furnishing you with some sketches of scenes in this lower branch of the legislature, how laws are made at oyster saloons and affairs of State are discussed over a glass of punch and how the Maine Law takes behind the curtain. It might be an "ancient sow" for an humble correspondent to peep into these sanctums of the General Assembly and reveal some of the first principles of law making. It might not look well for me to draw aside the curtains and allow the public to look in upon the drama which is being privately enacted in the lobby. This branch keeps no journal for their constituency to look over—the members of that large and respectable body will pardon me if I tell them that I cannot resist the temptation of journalizing somewhat for them, without being especially elected clerk for that business. But enough for this evening. I have not served you up much intelligence from the Halls of Legislation, for the reason that most of the business has been of a local and private character not affecting the general weal of the State. PRENTICE.

Correspondence of the Daily Tribune.

SPRINGFIELD, (Ill.,) Jan. 7, 1853.

To the Editors of the Daily Tribune:—

It is idle to speculate about the success of any Railroad measure as the numerous projects now on foot for these purposes make the fate of each more or less connected with the other. There seems to be no end to the applications for charters. I think the people at large are not apprised of the various project in this line. As soon as one application is made for a charter, another suddenly springs up appealing to the General Assembly for a like purpose, and ten to one if it be not a rival road. How to reconcile these conflicting interests is a question of no small moment, and every project must meet with embarrassments and opposition from some source. The Legislature will have to grant charters wherever asked, (which seems to be the disposition of many members,) or there will be difficulty in securing the passage of any bill for charters.

Mr. Ramsey, member from Marshall county, brought forward a bill this evening for a road from New Boston on the Mississippi, to run in a direct line east to Fort Wayne, Ind. This measure has been covertly matured for fear of arousing opposition. It has already awakened that opposition which it dreaded so much, and it is doomed to a certain defeat. An amendment of the charter of the Chicago and Milwaukee Road has been proposed, reducing the capital stock.

The Fox River interests will throw every obstacle in its way, but I do not think they can muster force enough to do any harm to the road. A disposition exists upon the part of the new members to extend all reasonable aid to works of internal improvement, and if the body does not erowd too close upon the unbiassed judgment of the General Assembly, most railroad measures will receive a merited attention; but the outside influences will unquestionably embarrass the success of many noble projects.—I think it impossible to get the full force of Bishop Butler's "Analogy," or of Bishop Watson's "Apology," without first comprehending the "Constitution of Man."

You say you have devoted yourself to the profession of Law. It is a noble profession.—The common law, as contra-distinguished from statute law has the deep foundations in morals.—Some base material have been wrought into it by rude hands during a long period of darkness and semi-barbarism; but it is still a glorious structure. The age which its true high spirits perpetually ask are. What is just? What is right? This profession, in all ages, has ingrafted on the ablest and truest men; not because the nobles and truest men go into it, but because its discipline, its incitements and its training, create them.

In practising your profession, always seek for principles, and make precedents bend to them, never the reverse. Never espouse the wrong side of a cause knowingly; and if, unwittingly, you find yourself on the wrong side, leap out of it as quick as you would jump out of a vat of boiling brimstone, should you accidentally fall into one. It is utterly amazing to me how a man can trifle with his own mind.—I do not mean, how, his mind considered as a part of his immortal self, but his mind considered as the mere instrument with which he works. If you destroy the celestial temper of that instrument, can you expect ever to restore its keenness again? It is impossible. What would you think of a poor barber who should batter the edge of his razors against flint as preparatory to shaving? What that would be wisdom, swills down ten times distilled,—compare! with the man who would wear off the edge of his conscience against known error.

It is so grievous a misfortune to lose the natural eye, how can we be indifferent to blinding the moral eye, without whose light the whole body is full of darkness? To tell a single lie is held dishonorable. What is known sophistry but a series of lies—a procession of them—which the false reasoner marshals and marches to their vile work? I would rather be at the head of a thief's soldiers, than to have my name go down in the law books attached to any argument which any fair-minded man could believe to have been insincere.

I well know, for I have often heard, what the old lawyers say about its being right to defend a wrong side. I deny it all, and abhor it. If a client wants such work done, he shall not have my soul to do it with. I should not like to catch the small pox, but that would be a trifle to catch the small pox, but that would be a trifle in comparison with the injury he has done about the law, and its decisions are unanimous. A small residuum remains about which the courts disagree. In many civil suits also, it is a matter of indifference how an established and uniform rule, but of no apparent consequence which way it is established.

So in criminal cases, from the different representations which hostile clients make to their respective counsel, each one may undertake in the case, believing himself to be on the right side. I will there not involved in the course of the trial that he is on the wrong side, he may when counsel for the United States, should be sent to Leghorn to take it on board. Mr. Greenough, on being notified of this, caused the statuary to be properly packed and sent to Leghorn for shipment, where it was delivered more than twelve months ago, and he came himself to this country for the purpose of superintending the placing of it in the place of its destination. After a long delay, a vessel was sent to Leghorn for the purpose of taking the work on board, but on account of an obstacle to getting the package down the hatches, it was left behind, and it there still remains, subject to such accidents as may befal it in a common storehouse.

In one of his visits to this country, Mr. Greenough was united in marriage to Miss Gore of this city, by whom he has several children. Mr. Greenough's son must annually, and in person, attend to the business of private life. His great success in his art, and the reputation which it conferred upon him, did not weaken at all his natural love of home. He evidently shrank, on more than one occasion, from public demonstrations of respect which his fellow citizens would gladly have offered him.

For a few weeks since, he exhibited symptoms of the disease which so soon terminated his life.—He had, however, two or three weeks before, expressed his full confidence in, and serious hope before him—he breaks forth in these thrilling, almost inspiring, certainly inspiring accents, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight! I have finished my course. I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which God, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day. And indeed believe, that a sober and exhaustive comparison of the death-beds of those who have repudiated the gospel with the dying moments of those who have accepted and rejoiced in it, would alone convince mankind that christianity is true—that infidelity, practical or theoretical, is a delusion, a delusion, mischievous in life, and miserable in death.—Channing's Voice of the Day.

SATURDAY EVENING READINGS.

The Waldensian Bible Pedler.

Many years before any Bible Society was formed, poor and pious men among the Waldenses went up and down the mountains and valleys in the character of pedlers, in order to distribute the Word of God. In the following lines our readers will see the simple story of one of these devoted and persecuted men:

"Oh! lady fair, these silks of mine
Are beautiful and rare;
The richest web of the Indian loom,
Which beauty's self might wear;
And these pearls are pure and mild to behold,
And with radiant light they vie;
I have bro't them with me a weary way—
Will my gentle lady buy?"

And the lady smiled on the worn old man,
Through the dark and clustering curls
Which veiled her brow as she stooped to view
His silks and glittering pearls;
And she placed their price in the old man's hand,
And lightly she turned away;
But she paused at the wanderer's earnest call—
"My gentle lady, stay!

"Oh! lady fair, I have yet a gem,
Which a purer lustre flings
Than the diamond flash of the jeweled crown,
On the lofty brow of kings;
A wonderful pearl of exceeding price,
Whose virtue shall not fade;
Whose light shall be as a spell to thee,
And a blessing on thy way!"

The lady glanced at the mirroring steel,
Where her youthful form was seen,
Where her eye rose more clear, and her dark locks waved,
Her clasping pearls between:
"Bring forth thy pearl of exceeding worth,
Thou traveller gray and old;
And name the price of thy precious gem,
And my page shall count thy gold."

The cloud went off from the pilgrim's brow,
As a small and meagre book,
Unmasked by gold or diamond gem,
From his folding robe he took:
"Here, lady fair, is the pearl of price—
May it prove as such to thee!
Nay, keep thy gold—I ask it not—
For the Word of God is free!"

The hoary traveller went his way—
But the gift he left behind
Hath fed the souls of perfect work
On the high-born maiden's mind;
And she hath turned from her pride of sin
To the loveliness of truth,
And given her heart to God
In the beauteous hour of youth.

And she hath left the old gray halls
Where an evil faith hath power,
And the courtly knights of her father's train,
And the maidens of her bower;
And she hath gone to the Vaudois vale,
By lordly feet untrod,
Where the poor and the needy of earth are rich
In the perfect love of God!

Rebecca.

One of the most interesting and lovely characters, among all those ladies of the olden time, is that of Rebecca, the youthful bride, the matronly wife, the aged companion, of Isaac.—Like Sarah, she had her faults, but they are lost in the superiority of her virtues.

I shall refer to only one passage in her history—a passage of interest to all, of especial interest to the circumstances of many, her youthful marriage with Isaac, the man of her heart's choice, and the man too of her parent's choice.

In Isaac and Rebecca we find the actors in one opposite manifestation of marriages, or revel through a long life, precisely as God ordained it in Eden, and as Jesus Christ reordained it in the New Testament, when he said: For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave unto his wife and they two shall be one flesh.

How I have loved a little into the writings of classical antiquity, have read somewhat of history, of philosophy, of Biography, of modern lawyer, and modern adviser. In these nine of the next hundred cases, an intelligent counsellor knows what the law is, and, so far as his client is concerned, can stop litigation. In forty-nine cases out of fifty, the highest court has no doubt about the law, and its decisions are unanimous. A small residuum remains about which the courts disagree. In many civil suits also, it is a matter of indifference how an established and uniform rule, but of no apparent consequence which way it is established.

So in criminal cases, from the different representations which hostile clients make to their respective counsel, each one may undertake in the case, believing himself to be on the right side. I will there not involved in the course of the trial that he is on the wrong side, he may when counsel for the United States, should be sent to Leghorn to take it on board. Mr. Greenough, on being notified of this, caused the statuary to be properly packed and sent to Leghorn for shipment, where it was delivered more than twelve months ago, and he came himself to this country for the purpose of superintending the placing of it in the place of its destination. After a long delay, a vessel was sent to Leghorn for the purpose of taking the work on board, but on account of an obstacle to getting the package down the hatches, it was left behind, and it there still remains, subject to such accidents as may befal it in a common storehouse.

In one of his visits to this country, Mr. Greenough was united in marriage to Miss Gore of this city, by whom he has several children. Mr. Greenough's son must annually, and in person, attend to the business of private life. His great success in his art, and the reputation which it conferred upon him, did not weaken at all his natural love of home. He evidently shrank, on more than one occasion, from public demonstrations of respect which his fellow citizens would gladly have offered him.

ADVERTISER'S DIRECTORY.

In consequence of the number and variety of our advertisements, which prevents our classifying them as we would under appropriate headings, we present below the names, with the business, of each of our advertising patrons, arranged in a manner that will, we think, give to them general satisfaction, and prove a source of great convenience to those who are in search of advertisements in our columns. Notwithstanding the care with which it is prepared, we fear it is not so perfect as we would like—many names, probably, being omitted, and some incorrect. With the assistance of the interested we hope soon to present such an Advertising Directory as will prove highly acceptable to all concerned. The names of our yearly advertisers are inserted in it without additional charge, and we hope that the extra care we will be experienced and received as an evidence from us that we esteem their favors. It will always occupy a prominent place in The Tribune.

Our WEEKLY.—Call and see it. Our office is convenient, on the first floor, No. 55 Clark St., next door south of the Post Office. Examine it. Look at the size, typography, paper. Take it home and read it, and then if you do not send to all your Eastern friends as giving the best evidence of the enterprise, growth and prosperity of Chicago, it will be because you have so many friends that you cannot afford to spend five cents apiece on each of them.

The PRINTERS' FESTIVAL.—We have called attention before to this Anniversary, which is to come off at the Tremont House, on Monday evening, because it promises to be particularly agreeable, and one in which our citizens ought to participate. The arrangements made are, we understand, of the very best. The Managers have been unwearied in their exertions, and lavish in their expenditures. We hope that these will be met by a cordial response from all. The printers do not wish to be exclusive in their social enjoyments; they would like to meet at the festal board their friends from all professions In New York, the Printers' Festival is one of the most interesting, popular and brilliant occasions of the whole year. The leading merchants, lawyers, clergymen and bankers, honor it by their presence while they do honor to themselves. Why should not the printers of Chicago, with its six daily Papers, have a Celebration equally as attractive and beneficial? We are confident they will.

Tickets can be obtained at any of the daily newspaper offices. Price $4, admitting gentleman and lady.

A POOR CHANCE.—Such was the indignation expressed by our printers on hearing that some villain had knocked in one of our "forms"—stolen sacredest of sacred things in the eyes of the "craft,"—that law-abiding as they all are, we doubt whether they could have been restrained from visiting upon the burglar the extremest penalty of "Lynch Law," if he had been caught in the first flash of excitement.

A LECTURE TO MEDICAL STUDENTS.—The Rev. James M. Davis will, by request, preach a sermon to Medical Students on next Sabbath evening in Warner's Hall, at 7 o'clock. The Medical Faculty generally are respectfully invited to attend.

Mr. Davis will also preach in the same Hall at 2½ o'clock P. M.

☞ ON THE TRACK.—We have adopted measures for the hunting out of the villain who entered our Press Room, which are very likely to prove successful. We are greatly mistaken if we are not on the track.

WATER STREET PRICE.—A Bona fide offer was made yesterday for a lot in Water Street, with the out the building on it, of $250 a foot, and "indignantly refused." So we go up, up, up.

LARGE ADVANCE.—Hook 39 in section 7, was sold yesterday for $5,850. it lies on the Galena Railroad, about 2½ miles from the city. Last year it was sold for $2,500, by a lawyer of this city, who purchased it two years previous for $600.

☞ Mr. Barrett will deliver his next lecture in the New Church room corner of Dearborn and Randolph sts., next Sabbath (to-morrow) evening at 7 o'clock.

Subject—The doctrine of the New Church concerning the state of infants and young children in the "Spiritual World," forming quite a contrast with the Old doctrine on this subject, as exhibited in the last lecture.

DR. M'LANE'S VERMIFUGE.—This celebrated remedy is universally acknowledged as the best medicine ever discovered for expelling worms from the human body. The following is but one of the thousands of voluntary certificates that have been given in testimony of its efficacy:

GRAND, Ohio. March 15, 1851.

MESSRS. J. KIDD & CO.—I take pleasure in informing you that I have used one bottle of your celebrated Worm Specific with decidedly good effect, and would like to have some more of it. I could sell any quantity here. If you send it to me, I will sell it without any charge, for my trouble as there are but few physicians here.

GEORGE WAGGONER.

The invaluable Worm Medicine can be procured from Druggists in Chicago, and from country merchants.

The Interior will be kept constantly on hand a large and well selected assortment of Cigars and Tobacco. "The work is designed as a set off against Mrs. Stowe's, and, while it is not likely to be purchased by pro-slavery readers, as that was by the Abolitionists. It has met, already, with a great sale, and is in general demand. As an authentic history character at the South, the work is important."—Hartford Courant.

THE MUSIC BOOK THAT ALL ARE BUYING:

THE SINGING BIRD, or Progressive Music Reader, by Lowell Mason and George James Webb. Price 75 cents per dozen.

The publishers respectfully offer this book to teachers and the public as the most superior book for learning music it is intended, to any other juvenile book yet published.

From the Chicago Democratic Press, of Dec. 6th.

This is a new and excellent little book, full of beautiful and most delightful music. Every certain way is to visit the Lock Hospital, or Dr. D's office, at No. 150 Washington street, and at once place yourself under his care.

The author says that the "Singing Bird" is intended expressly for the use of Common Schools, and we think it will be found admirably adapted to that purpose. Many of the Public Schools and Seminaries, and Juvenile Classes, and most happily has he accomplished his object. Mr. Bradbury is already fairly distinguished as a writer of juvenile music, and this little work will, if possible, add to his reputation.

From the Chicago Journal of Dec. 7th.

It is admirably adapted to the purpose for which it is designed.

From the Chicago Tribune of Dec. 9th.

The new "Singing Bird" before us, wins the tribute in all attractive way from the A C C of the first hearers, and repays him with many pretty airs at the close.

From W. T. Pope an experienced Teacher of Music.

Messrs. S. C. Griggs & Co.—I have examined the Singing Bird, and find it well adapted to the purpose for which it is designed. It contains a very large assortment of both Sacred and Secular Singing Books now before the public.

From Mr. G. P. Abel, Chorister of the 1st Presbyterian Church, Chicago:

Messrs. S. C. Griggs & Co.—The "Singing Bird" or Progressive Music Reader, by Lowell Mason and George James Webb, with some rare and think it the most admirable thing for Schools and Singing Classes that has ever been published. They are such that they cannot fail to interest and improve the pupil in the study of music. I shall introduce it into my Singing Class. I do not hesitate pronouncing it the best work in print. Bradbury's "Singing Bird" also used it in my Juvenile Classes and class[illegible] and say that I consider it the best work in print.

Yours, &c. GEO. P. ABEL.
